

Panda Privacy Policy Overview

At Panda, your privacy is our highest priority. As an anonymous chat platform, we are committed to creating a secure and respectful space where users can communicate freely without fear of exposure or data misuse. Panda does not require personal information such as email addresses, phone numbers, or real names to use its core services. All messages are end-to-end encrypted and stored temporarily, ensuring that no private conversations are accessible to anyone except the intended recipients. We do not track user identities, and our servers are configured to avoid logging sensitive data like IP addresses. Any optional metadata collected--such as device type or general location--is solely used to improve user experience and maintain platform stability. We strictly follow international data protection regulations, including the GDPR and CCPA, and we never sell or share user data with third-party advertisers. Users are empowered with full control over their conversations, including the ability to delete messages permanently. Our goal is to foster trust, anonymity, and open communication in a digital space that values privacy as a fundamental right.
